RESEARCH INTERESTS

Computer-related failures may be the results of accident, or they may be caused by software faults present in software that was poorly designed and inadequately tested. Moreover, failures can occur because of malicious activity by vandals and criminals, either as intruders trying to obtain information, or through the application of vandalware such as worms and viruses.

My research has been focused on the prevention, detection, and remediation of information system failures and misuse, with an emphasis on applied information security. This has included research in fault tolerance, software testing and debugging, intrusion detection, software forensics, and security policies. I have also been involved in issues of science and national security policy.
